Six students from the PA School of Culinary Arts, a division of YTI Career Institute-Lancaster, will be participating in an American Culinary Federation Competition Sunday at Stratford University in Baltimore.

Among the six competitors are Lancaster County residents Janette Hershey, of Gap, who will enter a platter of chocolates, and Rebecca Zimmerman, of New Holland, who will enter a decorated cake.

To prepare for the competition, students spent weeks prepping their chocolate-inspired pieces after class time and on weekends to make sure everything was primed.

"They have been practicing hard for this big competition," said Susan Notter, pastry chef director.

"Firstly, they had to develop the ideas and then begin making everything a few times until we were happy with the result and it met the standard needed to compete," Notter said. "Now they are down to the final production and will transport everything on Sunday morning to Baltimore."
